

Funding for international conferences

Young female researchers (doctoral candidates and post-doctoral researchers) of the Department for Sport and Health Sciences can apply for travel grants to international academic congresses and conferences. The applicant is required to actively contribute to the conference with a (poster) presentation. This funding program is aimed at female researchers to present and discuss their own research at relevant, international events. The faculty's Diversity Officer will be happy to advise you on this funding measure before you apply.

Eligibility to apply

Funding can be applied for when other funding options (graduate school, chair, third-party funding, DAAD, etc.) have been exhausted. Central is an own contribution to the event (lecture, workshop, poster) and at least partial financial support by the Chair. Please clarify these conditions before submitting your application and explain them in relation to your situation in your letter of motivation.

Reporting

Please submit a report on your academic experience and the results of your conference visit after attending the event.

Application

Applications can be submitted at any time to the Diversity Officer. The following documents must be included:

- Letter of motivation (with reference to the importance of participation for your own research and qualification, as well as the funding conditions)
- Curriculum vitae
- Statement of costs
- Description of the congress / conference (flyer, program or similar) and proof of your own contribution (lecture, workshop, poster)

The Department's Diversity Committee reviews applications and decides on funding.
